For decades, the CCMH has been supporting and facilitating the growth of Canada's independent pharmacy and pharmacy educators, and helping those in our profession to "connect the dots" between pharmacy practice and education. The CCMH is the national voice for the Canadian independent pharmacy community. It works with the federal government, provincial ministries of health, and its members to achieve common goals and objectives for Canadian pharmacists. The CCMH is a close-knit, and non-profit, family of independent pharmacies. Happy Valentine's Day, everyone! This week marks a time in our history when some of us are celebrating love, others are preparing to participate in a millennia-old ceremony, and others are contemplating the novelty of this holiday's existence in the first place. Of course, for some of us, the purpose of this whole thing is to present a token of love to the other person in your life, which is why I would like to take a moment to recommend showing someone you love them via the web. Whether it's a generic message, a full-blown e-card, or perhaps a'special edition' of the font you use on your computer screen, it doesn't matter. All of these have the same goal: to convey that message. While others celebrate Valentine's Day for the promise of spending time with that person, I prefer to celebrate it for its acknowledgment of the kindnesses that are shown every single day. "You know what?" I said to myself as I awoke this morning. "I really appreciate all of the little acts of kindness that are performed by anyone at any time." Whether it's helping a person change a tire, offering directions, or patiently listening to someone moan, we all go through all sorts of acts of kindness every single day. That's the joy of being alive. (As a side note, I always find it strange to think that there's a day dedicated to, well, showing people that you care about them. Not only does f678ea9f9e
